An Artificial Larynx.

One of the most remarkable operations in the history of surgery is now being performed at the New York Hospital by Dr. Bull, one of America's most noted surgeons. He has removed a man's larynx and vocal organs, and is new perfecting a machine whereby the patient will be able to articulate in a loud tone.

About six months ago Mr. Wm. Wilson, an engineer of Newburg, N. Y., who is undergoing this painful but heroic operation, experienced a difficulty in breathing. He thought at first that it was some throat affection caused by a cold, but the trouble in-creased at such a rate that he felt it expe dient to come to New York and con-ult Dr.

Bull. It is fortunate that he did, for had he delayed two days he would have been a dead man. As it was he was in dead man. As it was he was in decaded. dead man. As it was, he was in danger of

Dr. Bull thought that Mr. Wilson was suffering from a papillary growth in the laryax, the same disease that the Crown Prince of Germany was under treatment in England for. The operation of tracheotomy was performed by cutting an orifice in his windpipe and passing a silver tube into the lungs, thus allowing the man to breathe through this medium. When it was necessary to feed him, this opening was plugged up with a rubber cork. The larynx was also opened at this time, scraped out and cauterized.

Mr. Wilson went home in apparently good health and experiencing no difficulty with his new breathing machinery. He did not enjoy his freedom from pain very long, how-eyer, for he returned in three weeks with his throat in a worse condition than at first The wound was opened and a piece of the papillary growth examined under a micro-scope. It was learned that Mr. Wilson was suffering from cancer of the larynx. Dr. Bull then decided to remove the whole larynx, and with the assistance of Dr. Weir five weeks ago performed a most successful operation. Mr. Wilson, who is a man 62 years of age, stood the ordeal bravely, but it was decided to put him under the influence of ether. The surgeons cut an incision down the median line of the neck perpendicular ly over what is known as Adam's apple The wound being well sponged, the delicate task of removing two inches of the man' larynx was then undertaking. It was cu off just above the trachen and below the epiglottis, and the piece removed. It re sembles in alcohol a piece of macaroni hal as large as a man's thumb and about as long The wound was packed with an antiseptic dressing that stopped the flow of blood and tended to heal the cut. Food was then administered to him by means of a hard rub-ber tube passing into his mouth, through the asophagus and into the stomach. Two weeks ago a tube was attached to the tracheal tube on the inside of the orifice in his throat. This tube passed upward into the back part of the mouth, partly filling the cavity that was formerly occupied by the

After this tube was put into his mouth Mr. Wilson could talk with his tongue and lips, but his articulation was very faiot. Then after this tube was inserted it was necessary to put a ping in the upper end of the tube whenever he wished to eat, for without a ping his food, instead of following the natural channel to the stomach, would lodge in the tube. Dr. Buil therenpon inserted a rubber ball that closely fitted the orifice. This accomplished the desired result in that direction. Then the plug was withdrawn from the other, or tracheal tube, thereby allowing the man to breathe and eat at the same time.

Having performed these astonishing operations so successfully, Dr. Bull thought he would go further and provide the man with a talking apparatus, seeing that he had cut away all of his vocal organs. He is ac complishing his purpose in a wonderfully comprising his purpose in a wonderland clever manner, inasmuch as he has made a hellow plug to fit the tube that runs into the mouth. In this hollow plug a reed identical to the little tengue metal that vibrates in a harmonica is placed and fastened with great care in such a manner that it will vibrate and cause a distinct tone when the outer orifice is closed and the sir drawn into the mouth, through the two jointed tubes into the lungs and from the lungs expelled in the same manner.

The doctor is experiencing some trouble in fitting this reed, but thinks that in a week's time Mr. Wilson can talk as well as he ever could, though his tone will be one reed properly taken care of should last him the remainder of his natural life. He has stood his suffering well and when he returns home in a few days he will be enabled to attend to his business, though it is thought that his friends won't recognize his voice over the telephone. For delicacy of operation and the remarkable results attained this operation has never been equal
